About Pest-Ventures

Pest-Ventures brings together people from across the pest management business – bridging the gap between pest control researchers and practitioners.

Established in 1999, the 2012 programme is brought to you by Adrian Meyer from Acheta, Moira Hart from communications consultancy, Dewpoint Marketing and Frances McKim & Helen Riby, editors and publishers of Pest magazine and the associated digital news service.

PEST-VENTURES 2012

Meeting the challenge of providing an effective, value for money pest management service has never been tougher.

Customer expectations in both the commercial and domestic sectors remain high. There are technical challenges to overcome, such as rodenticide resistance and the explosion in bed bug infestations.

Public sector cuts threaten local authority services, recession hit customers, especially in the domestic market, are increasingly reluctant to spend on pest control. And, the legal and regulatory position is in a state of flux with anticoagulant rodenticides, for example, still under threat from 'Green' MEPs in the European Parliament.

Against this backdrop it is more important than ever to keep up-to-date with current research, legal developments and best practice. So come along to Pest-Ventures 2012 and find out how to work smarter, not harder.

Who should attend?

All pest management professionals including pest control technicians in the public or private sector, facilities managers, the people responsible for pest control in local authorities, water and food companies, consultants and the manufacturers and distributors of pest management products.
